Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Hamptons is having a sale. Did you see the flyer?

Learning Outcome

Accurately exchange information about buying things in communicative situations.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about things in a shop.
- I can say how much things cost.
- I can write a flyer using persuasive language.

Ask your partner:

- Which clothing stores are expensive in your neighborhood?
- Which clothing stores have sales?

Let's Explore!

Looking for high-end clothing? There's a sale on at Hamptons.

* "High-end" means expensive.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Sally: Hey, Vanessa. What are you up to today?
Vanessa: I'm doing yoga this morning but that's it. Why?
Sally: Hamptons is having a fabulous sale. I have a flyer.
Vanessa: When is it? That store is expensive.
Sally: Today and tomorrow only.
Vanessa: Cool, let me take a shower and I'll head over to your place.
Sally: OK, let yourself in but watch out for Meeneee.
Vanessa: Meeneee?
Sally: Yeah, my cat, remember?
Vanessa: Oh right OK.
Sally: Bring some coffee and something to eat.
Vanessa: Uh huh.
Sally: We have a long day of shopping ahead.

Let's Practice!

All these bargains! Where do I start?

Learning Points

Imperatives

In advertisements like flyers, you use persuasive language to encourage the buyer to believe or do something.

Being persuasive means to try to convince a person to do something.

Imperatives ask the reader to do something quickly.

Examples:

- Sale on now.
- Hurry!
- Buy Hamptons boots now!
- Grab a deal!
- Get a bargain!
- Save money!
- Arrive early for opening specials!
- Bring some coffee and something to eat.
